The event was centred around the theme of "Building Banking Resilience: The Way Forward " This line postulates about the resilient and the self-healing banking and the finance sector that we have in India and not only broadly defines it in a short manner but also goes to the depth of narrowness of the factors that has helped us in achieving the holy grail. The event was aggrandized by the presence of Reverend Father Dr. A Rex Angelo, Principal, St Xavier's College, Jaipur, and our guest of honour Ms. Chhavi Garg who is a NIPAM officer Examiner of Patents &amp; Designs for the Department of Promotion of Industry &amp; Trade in the Ministry of Commerce &amp; Industry. This helped students not only by fostering their knowledge but also to assimilate their knowledge about the use of facts and figures present in today's world. The motions consisted of how the financial and banking sector has changed during and post pandemic, this was the most propitious as the industry as a whole saw an upliftment in client retention and banking and investment as people saw the scope in Fintech and Banking sector. Another sector which was discussed was Banking became accessible to all due to the technological advancement via UPI and other gateways.

ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

Evolving Ecological Concerns:
Transgressions, Transitions and Transformation
Ecology is a broad term that is shaped by and contracted upon a harmonious relation between human beings and their environment. Both geographical and man-made. Disturbance in either environment has a domino effect, culminating in serious changes in the state of natural resources and climate, that indubitably leads to conflict in geo-political, socio-cultural and economic contexts of identity of an individual and a nation. In fact there exists an all-inclusive action-reaction relation between all of these, where the cause certainly turns out to be a response. The world is witnessing unprecedented changes in the environment and the changing ecology is a matter of concern for individuals, societies and nations at large, as it is affecting and threatening the existence of one and all. Climate change, global warming, environmental degradation, and the exhaustion of natural resources are seemingly only concerned with nature but there are several factors that have influenced and added to these phenomena: education, capitalism, politics, industrialization, and market economy. The Multi-Disciplinary International Conference Evolving Ecological Concerns: Transgressions, Transitions and Transformation, is in the line of various debates happening concurrently to mediate, show the multifold and reciprocal impact on human lives due to ecological changes. In the last century people had discussed global warming and depleting water resources, but the contemporary discourses do not just highlight the urgency of the situation, as we live on the brink of disaster, but are simultaneously focusing on action. In line with these deliberations, the present conference aims to explore how the changing ecology has been triggered by and have led to transgressions ( human against human and nature) of multiple scales, transitions seemingly from preceding state to present but lying in a constant temporal-vertical movement, resulting in unexpected transformations.
